

Congratulations you're getting married!

We're excited about getting together with you to answer your questions and to talk about Crossroads and our understanding of what constitutes a Christian approach to marriage. It's important for you to understand some of the basic commitments Crossroads will ask of you if we decide to conduct your marriage ceremony. We will ask you to engage with us in the following ways:

1. Attend Crossroads worship services during the time of your engagement and to look for ways to become involved in the life of the church.
2. Contact Debi Heggeland for pastor or facility availability and fees at 630.585.7777 x341 or dheggeland@crossroadsconnect.net.
3. Once a pastor and date are confirmed you will be given information to take a premarital inventory.
4. Meet with a pastor to discuss the inventory, attend 4-6 sessions of couple premarital counseling and to plan the wedding ceremony.
5. If you have been divorced we ask that there be a two year waiting period between the time of the divorce and your wedding. In addition, we ask that you attend a Divorce Recovery Program. (This is offered at the church or at other facilities.)
6. Most importantly, we will ask you to do some serious reflection and discussion regarding the role Jesus Christ plays in your life, your commitment to follow Him and ways faith might nurture and encourage you in your marriage. We will want to know that you can subscribe in both principle and practice to the Christian concepts for marriage

In order to insure that we have adequate time to walk through all these steps we ask that a minimum of six months be given to fulfill all the requirements.

Why do we ask engaged couples to commit to so much?

The bottom line answer is that we believe Marriage is God's idea. It's important. It's not to be entered into lightly. We believe we have a responsibility, before God, to prepare people for a marriage that will last a lifetime. Crossroads wants to help bust the cycle of divorce that plagues our culture. We also want to get to know you and have you get to know us. We believe that marriages thrive when faith is alive and when a couple is vitally linked to a faith community.

FAQ: Frequently Asked Questions about Weddings at Crossroads

We're looking for a church that will marry us? Do we have to be members of Crossroads or a regular attendee?

You will notice in the wedding application that we ask couples to make us their church home during the time of their engagement. Before submitting your application, attend services for a few weeks. Ask yourself some questions. Is this the kind of church you'd feel comfortable attending week in and week out? Are the messages helping you to deal with the spiritual issues in your life? Do the people feel welcoming?

We have contemporary worship services at 8:00am, 9:35am and 11:15am.

We need to know right away if we can be married at Crossroads. We need to put a deposit down on a reception hall tomorrow. Can't you give us an answer today?

As a general rule we don't want to be rushed into making a decision based on the availability or unavailability of a reception hall. If you are part of our congregation, attend regularly and are known to us we can review your application and try to help you meet your deadline. There are no guarantees that we will be able to fit you into an interview time as quickly as you'd like, however.

Is it really necessary to go through all the premarital counseling?

Yes. We believe it's important to equip couples with the tools to look at their relationship realistically. How much time do we need to complete all the counseling? Approximately 4-6 weeks for the premarital sessions. Divorce Recovery is an ongoing program that requires 6 weeks to complete.

We're older. Why do we need to attend counseling?

We've had couples of all ages and backgrounds attend our premarital sessions and without exception everyone walks away with some information or insight that helps the relationship. We believe that when you stop learning - you stop growing. Marriages thrive when people continue to grow together.

I was divorced several years ago and went to counseling. Do I really have to go to a divorce recovery program?

Yes. We've found that God uses these seminars in powerful ways. It helps clarify issues, facilitates continued healing, and draws people closer to Jesus. Sometimes people go and find that they are used by God to encourage others. If you've attended a divorce recovery program of comparable scope and sequence to ours we are more than willing to accept that program as a substitute for our own.

We're living together. Is that a problem?

First of all, we are thrilled that you want to be married. We believe marriage is what God wants for every couple that falls in love and see themselves in a permanent relationship. Secondly, we want to meet every couple where they are at without compromising our role as God's church. That can be tricky.

You see, it's our understanding that when a couple approaches our church for marriage that both the man and the woman will agree with both Christian belief and practice. It makes little sense to be married in the name of God but not to live in accord with his promises and commands.

Living together is very prevalent in today's society. Even though the culture as a whole accommodates this practice the Christian church has held strongly to the sanctity of marriage and the accompanying rights and privileges given to husbands and wives exclusively. We are also concerned that there is a higher incidence of divorce among folks who live together prior to marriage. If you are living together we will work with you in examining what all this means and explore with you some possible adjustments that will help you to both honor God and prepare well for your married life together.

We haven't attended worship services for a long time. We're not even very religious. Is this a problem?

We know that getting married is one of those 'turning point' events that can point us to new possibilities. We don't believe God magically shows up to bless weddings. God wants to walk with you daily in your marriage.

Many people, for a variety of reasons haven't had an opportunity to discuss issues of faith within a caring and nurturing environment. Many people come to Crossroads with questions and concerns about faith. We try to answer those questions and deal with those concerns honestly. It's important that matters of faith be explored. We don't want you to make wedding vows in the name of a God you don't know or follow.

All of our ministers want you to find a rich and vibrant life of faith. We believe that following Jesus is the ultimate calling for any person. That's why we'll want you to examine the role the Lord plays in your life. The pastor working with you will review the basics of the Christian faith and invite you to walk with Jesus on a daily basis.

We want you to be open and willing to learn, grow and experience the life of faith. If you're not open to exploring what a life with Jesus might look like then we're probably not a good fit for you.

We don't want to connect with Crossroads. We just want a church wedding. Will you rent us your facilities and provide a pastor?

No. Crossroads Community Church is not a wedding chapel.

What is the wedding fee at Crossroads?

The fee, which covers all premarital sessions, the rehearsal and the wedding, varies depending on which venue is selected.
